

In Dreams I See
My Mother

George N. Allen (1812-1877)

George Nelson Allen (1812-1877) was born in Mansfield, Massachusetts, and studied with studied Lowell Mason in Boston. He went to Ohio and studied at Western Reserve College and Oberlin Collegiate Institute. While a student at Oberlin, he was appointed an instructor in music and became a professor of music after graduating and founded the Oberlin Musical Association. He also studied geology and, for a time, held an additional appointment at Oberlin as professor of Geology and Natural History. He was choir director at the First Congregational Church Choir in Oberlin. Poor health forced him to retire in 1871 and he moved to Cincinnati to be near his son. He died in Cincinnati. He wrote many hymns and songs and compiled a hymnal for Oberlin College.

In dreams I see my mother now,
Her locks are silv'ed gray;
I see upon her placid brow
The cares of many a day.
Her eye grows dim, her step is slow,
Her strength is failing fast,
Her voice is tremulous and low,
For youth's bright day is past.

We knelt, in childhood by her side
To say our evening prayer;
Her gentle voice was then our guide,
It soothed each little care;
But as at night the weary dove
Flies to her mountain nest,
She winged her way to heaven above,
With angels there to rest.

If then you have a mother dear,
O! love her while you may;
She will not always linger here,
Too soon she'll pass away.
Her love we know not how to prize,
'Till from us she is riven;
'Till like an angel from the skies
She points the way to heaven.

Edward A. Perkins (1834-1922?)
