At Cincinnati he was made the assistant director of the college and then held the position of manager for 25 years. He left that position and taught at the University of California, Los Angeles. He authored books on music history, theory and harmony and published a course book for music reading. In 1911, He was appointed by the secretary of state at Washington as a delegate from the United States to the international musical congress at Rome. He died in Los Angeles.

Goodbye, goodbye, Old Winter gray!
Your reign is fairly over,
We'll gladly change your snow and ice
For fresh green grass and clover!
Just for your comfort, Winter gray,
We hope you will remember
With how much joy we welcomed in
Your chilly grim December.

But ah! the green and radiant hills!
The meadows freshly glowing!
The streams imprisoned for so long,
So brightly, gladly flowing.
We mean to be polite to you,
And shake your hand at parting;
But dear Old Winter, gray old friend,
Please don't delay your starting.
