Thomas George Beverley Halley (1823-1891) was born in St. Georges (East), Middlesex, England. He became the long-serving organist at St. James', Holloway, and taught music at the St. James's Institute. He died in Barnet, Middlesex, England. He composed a number of church pieces, glees, and part-songs.

Daylight is ending, shadows are blending,
Evening serenely is closing again;
Soft winds are sighing, birds homeward flying,
Lonely are valley, and mountain, and plain.

Out on the ocean, gently in motion,
Catching the light airs that gratefully play.
Vessels are swimming, swallows are skimming,
All things are bidding "Good night to the day."
