D. C. Heath and Company
(1890)

Arthur Battelle Whiting (1861-1936) was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts, son of music educator and composer Charles E. Whiting. At 13, he made his debut as a concert pianist in Worcester, Massachusetts. He studied at the New England Conservatory and at the Munich Conservatory. Returning to the U.S., he settled in Boston and worked mainly as a composer. He moved to New York, where he worked as a teacher and concert pianist. He also taught music courses at Harvard, Princeton, and Yale Universities. He died in Beverly, Massachusetts. His choral compositions include motets, anthems, and larger works for combined vocal and instrumental forces.

In a forest dell,
Where the wild deer dwell,
Where the red rose tempts the bee,
We wile away
The sultry day
Under the greenwood tree;

We know the vale
Where the lily pale
Droops beneath the morning dew;
Where the ivy creeps,
And the violet peeps
With its modest eyes of blue.
