He was chief organist for the John Stetson Mission Sunday School, conducted the Stetson Chorus of Philadelphia, and was a music instructor at the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind where he taught piano, violin, harmony and composition. He died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He edited or co-edited a number of hymn collections. He composed cantatas, anthems, hymns, gospel songs, and was well known for some of his secular songs. His songs "Sleep, Sleep, Sleep" and "Kentucky Babe" were recorded and popularized by Fred Waring and Bing Crosby.

Row, boatman, row us o'er the waters blue,
Row us o'er the waters blue.

The night is bright and fair;
The breeze is fresh, the stars are gleaming,
Sweet music fills the air,
With joy and love our hearts are teeming;

Then, boatman, row us o'er the stream,
With steady hand and splashing oar
We'll glide beneath the moon's soft beam,
Till home again, we'll be once more.

Boatman, row us o'er the stream,
Row us o'er the placid stream,
The silvery stream.
